Supreme Court of Tennessee
Administrative Office of the Courts
Nashville, Tennessee 37219
www.tncourts.gov

ELIZABETH A. SYKES
Director

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
April 12, 2011

Contact: Laura Click
615-532-6047 (office)
615-440-2555 (cell)

MEDIA ADVISORY:
Supreme Court Justice Partners with Attorneys to Encourage Female Minority Students to Consider Law Careers

Knoxville, Tenn. – Tennessee Supreme Court Justice Sharon G. Lee is among a group of attorneys and law students who will talk to Knoxville area female minority students about pursuing legal careers. The National Association of Women Judges (NAWJ) is partnering with the YWCA of Knoxville to host this event.

Twenty female minority students from Knoxville-area high schools were chosen to participate in the Color of Justice program, which will feature panel discussions about choosing law as a career and how judges and lawyers make a difference. The event will also include a luncheon where the students will get the opportunity to interact with the panelists and ask them questions.

The program will include the following panelists: Supreme Court Justice Sharon G. Lee; Tasha Blakney, attorney at Eldridge & Blakney; Ta Kisha Fitzgerald, Assistant District Attorney; LaKena Middlebrook, attorney and director of the YWCA Phyllis Wheatley Center; Jhasta Moore, attorney at The Bosch Law Firm; Linda Shea of Lexis Nexis and four students from the University of Tennessee College of Law.

The program is made possible through generous financial support from LexisNexis.

WHO: Female minority students from Knoxville area high schools, Supreme Court Justice Sharon G. Lee and Knoxville-area women attorneys
WHAT: The National Association of Women Judges is presenting the Color of Justice program to encourage female minority students to consider legal careers.
WHEN: Saturday, April 16, 2011 from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.
WHERE: Lincoln Memorial University - Duncan School of Law
Knoxville, TN

###